WINIFRED RETA FITZGERALD

Our Classmate, Winifred Fitzgerald, died October 13, 1923. She was a student of exceptional ability; her name has invariably appeared on the Honor Roll. At the awarding of the Three Year Honor Pins, Winifred's memory was honored by a "Magna Cum Laude" pin, which went to her parents. She was always ready to give her time and services to any class project. Her fine scholastic record, her happy disposition, and her many acts of friendship have placed her high in the esteem of the faculty and pupils.

Forever honored; forever mourned.

GEORGIA E. LYON

We, the class of 1923½, feel that no finer tribute can be paid our class advisor, Miss Lyon, than that given her at the class banquet: "A friend she is, who sets her heart upon us, who is happy with us, delights in us, and does all that is in her power to do for us, and does for us what we want, is willing and fully engaged to do all she can for us, and one on whom we can rely in all cases." Such is our class adviser!

"Thou wert our guide, philosopher and friend."

History of the Class of 1923½ of Central High School

A document of historic anecdotes in the form of a dialogue between two graduates of the class, who meet again in 1935, and who, after the preliminary greetings, start to chat of dear old Central High.

"Didn't we have some good old times in that class of 1923½? Ours certainly was a great class, you must admit."

"It certainly was. We showed them what a small class with a lot of 'pep' can do. When I think of all the things we did in three years, I wonder the clock didn't run slow."

"Do you remember when we came to Central as 'little green freshies' and suffered the agony of wearing our hair in pigtails?"

"And came home each day with our arms loaded with books to let people know that we went to High School?"

"Yes, and endeavored to twist our tongues around the entanglements of that 'Undertaker's Song' and 'Bracks-Quacks-Quacks' under the guidance of Kendall Joy? I remember sitting in the back and wondering what under the sun the rest of the school was yelling."

"Then you must surely recall the class picnic at Riverside. Don't you remember how we were all cheering and singing when Merrill lost his hat and had to go back after it?"

"It was about the same time we ran our first real dance. We all had a wonderful time."

"But wasn't that dance a failure? Hardly anyone attended!"

"A failure? Why, there was a big crowd there! Alphonse Alphano came!"

"I was talking of picnics, not dances, for I'll never forget the one at Forest Lake. It didn't look as if we were going at first. We didn't get the kind of weather we ordered, and the truck didn't come. But we procured another truck and after we got there, we made up for lost time. Remember how we played drop the handkerchief in the dance hall and 'Junie' Hurlbut arrived just in time to give out the forfeits? Then we had that impromptu entertainment in the theatre and Miss Lyon gave that funny stuttering stunt and Merrill, Alice, and somebody else acted hero, heroine, and villain."

"Well, have you talked yourself out at last? Here you have been raving about a 3B picnic and we were discussing our sophomore year."

"I must confess my memory has run astray. Suppose you tell me about those activities."

"Well, there was the 2B Social and the Thanksgiving Assembly that we gave when we were 2A's, and the Junior Prom, and the 3B dance. We were lively little things!"

"What about that memorable card party we held in the lunchroom? The boys collected card tables and brought chairs from all over the building. They also made numerous trips to the kitchen. Funny what an attraction candy is!"

"You must know, my dear, that our class possessed a very famous family tree. By the way, were you ever in Miss Anthony's English class? No? Then you don't remember Stuart Lyman. He was some boy! As I recall, he was very playful not only on the violin, but also in class, where he usually did his work to the tune of, 'Don't play with your fingers, Lyman.' "

"Wasn't Carl Miller in that class also?"

"Well, I should say so! He was a tireless student; when he started talking, nothing could stop him."

"One thing that has puzzled me is how a person could attend a school three years and fail to learn the location of the different rooms."

"Who on earth could that person be?"

"Why, Marion Ferguson. She never could find her way about without the aid of a certain young orator named Johnson."

"There seems to be one who stands out in my mind—ah, Barbara Shattuck, of course! What would our class have done without her? She was a born manager. She managed everything from a rummage sale to the whole class! Why, even this day, I'll wager she's managing her husband!"

"Talking about managers, don't forget 'Laurie' Phelps. He was a Midas where our class was concerned. As treasurer of the class, he certainly deserved great credit; but leave it to Laurence—he got the cash every month."

"I'll say he did! When he had charge of that famous comic-opera Pinafore, he could convince you to go without your lunch to buy tickets."

"He certainly couldn't convince 'Junie' Hurlbut of that. He used to sit in the corner seat of Room 217 and at lunch time you'd think he was starting on a Marathon."

"This talk of races reminds me of Maxham Metcalf. He liked to run very much. He ran for almost every office in class at one time or another."

"Well, you'll have to give him credit. He never ran after the girls!"

"In that respect he reminds me of Louis Mazer—they were so different!"

"Mazer had nothing on Johnnie Stewart."

"After all, do you realize that our class must have had a great attraction?"

"What do you mean by that?"

"Well, several people, for example, Morris Seader and Harry Fisher, liked it well enough to let their classes go ahead and join ours."

"It took those boys a long time to realize that there are more than three days in a week. Don't you remember that Fisher was so enthusiastic over graduation that he dozed off at the rehearsal?"

"The last incident that remains firmly fixed in my mind is our Senior Prom. Wasn't it glorious?!"

"Glorious is no word for it. Why it was a wonderful, lively affair! There weren't any wall-flowers that night. Those who could dance did so, and those who couldn't didn't know it, and so they thought they were dancing."

"All in all, the Prom was a very successful and glorious way to end our social activities."

The Presentation of the Class of 1923½

Ladies and Gentlemen:

It has long been the ambition and endeavor of the Central High School to graduate a perfect class. We, the class of 1923½, offer you our congratulations on having at last fulfilled your ambition. In recognition of the outstanding qualities of various members of our distinguished class, we wish to present these members with appropriate gifts.

We understand that during this past semester Merrill Keyes has had a little difficulty in mastering the science of mathematics. We know, Merrill, that this difficulty did not come from lack of application or intelligence, but rather from an excess of social and official duties. However, to aid you in further pursuit of this subject, we wish to present you with this clever little device used by the Eskimos to keep basketball scores.

The members of this school may rest assured that the Blue and White for 1924 will be a masterpiece of literature, as Jeanne Converse has been elected its editor-in-chief. Jeanne has been working very hard on this book, and we think it appropriate that she should be given something in which to put her many writings. . . . Here, Jeanne, is a waste basket.

Edwin Lyman has won the distinction of having his name engraved on several cups, but he has never been given a cup to keep. Here, Senator Lyman, is a handsome silver cup, fittingly engraved with your name on one side and a raspberry on the other.

Though it was very hard to select the prettiest girl from a class with so many fair damsels, Muriel Cleveland finally won this title. So that your beauty may be everlasting, here is something to keep that school girl complexion.

For four or five years you doubtless have been familiar with the bass voice of Cornelius Hurlbut carrying the lower part of Work for the Night is Coming. After much pressure on the part of his admirers, Junior finally broke down and confessed that he would have made a fine captain for H. M. S. Pinafore. As it is impossible to reproduce the play, we have decided to give captain Hurlbut a boat in which he may be sole commander.

When we hear that Leah Klempner's name was read regularly on the Honor Roll, we wonder if she does much homework. When we see the books she carries home, we wonder if she does anything but homework. Although we cannot say from experience how it feels to carry many books, we nevertheless sympathize with you. In order to make it easier for you in transporting them, we have this little book bag. If it doesn't hold them all, make two trips.

Clothes don't make the man, but they have a lot to do with it. When we hear the epithet dude, we think immediately of three people: the Prince of Wales, Rudolph Valentino, and Max Abrams. In order that the Prince and Rudolph may have nothing on Max, we wish to give him this small vanity case. Cleanse face thoroughly before using powder.

During a recent visit of the sociology class to that famous resort on York Street known as the Hampden County Jail, Louis Mazer was enthusiastic in his admiration of the luxurious cells inhabited by the guests. We all would hate to see Louis in jail, so here is a nice dry cell you can have right at home.

All those who have ever seen Alice Seybolt gliding along the corridors can easily see why the nickname "Shrimp" was given her. Of course there are many modern methods, which, when applied for thirty days, bring marvelous results. However, we believe in the old-fashioned methods. Here, Alice, is a quart of milk. Drink and be merry. Be sure to return the bottle.

We were greatly startled a few days ago by a confession from one of our classmates. To look at Maxham Metcalf one would not imagine that his conscience greatly troubled him; but, sad to relate, it is true. According to Maxham, himself, he has worn nothing but a stiff collar since his career at Central. Although you may be used to it by now, Maxham, we would like to give you this beautiful necktie to wear on cold days.

It certainly looks very bad for a Senior to be late to school as often as Marcia Hubbell is. It would be even worse for one who has won the distinction of being called a Post Graduate to come to school tardy two or three times a week. Therefore, to prevent a repetition of these unfortunate but frequent happenings, we give you this yeast cake to make you rise early.

Will John Stewart kindly step forward. We hail from Missouri, and although we do not believe everything we see and hear, we nevertheless are willing to be shown. We wondered if a man would walk a mile for a camel. He did! Here, John, keep it as a souvenir.

Many a fair maiden looks long and admiringly after Alden Lewis' curly head as he strolls about Central's spacious corridors. That your luxuriant locks may ever be as curly as they are now, Alden, we present you with these curling irons. If nature fails, turn to science.

The girl who has done most for '23½ is Barbara Shattuck. Because she has done so much for our class, we certainly hate to lose her. Here, Barbara, is some glue so that you will stick around awhile.

The writers of this presentation have recently made a contribution to science, which will without doubt revolutionize art. The work of the artist will be lessened appreciably by this miraculous discovery. As class artist we deem it appropriate and fitting that Virginia Smart should be the first to try this marvelous invention. Here, "Ginny," is a can of black and white striped paint.

The class of '23½ has long been noted for the musical ability of its members. You have all doubtless heard Carl Miller, the boy prodigy on the 'cello, as he has made several appearances on this very stage. Nothing could be more appropriate for Carl than something for his 'cello. All those who have heard him will agree with us that here is something that he can use on his 'cello. Here, Carl, is a hatchet. Don't put off until tomorrow that which can be done today.

Every class must, of course, have its handsomest boy as well as its prettiest girl; and with promptness and dispatch the 3A's elected Allen Rudolph Valentino Spencer, the Sheik of Room 217, to the glory of this title. Many have noticed and admired the mathematical neatness of Allen's silken locks and have wagered that he uses "slickum." We have here a substitute which is much cheaper than the fragrant oil, Allen, one-half pound of lard. Use with discretion!

And, lastly, but by far one of the most important personages connected with our class, is Miss Lyon, our esteemed faculty adviser who has always entered into each and everyone of the activities of the class with as much enthusiasm and interest as everyone of the 3A's. Therefore, so that you may always remember our class as many of its members must have appeared to you, we give you this bunch of dumbbells.

Class Poem

The years have passed. Time's never-ending rush
Has brought us at last to this final day
When we must sadly bid our last good-bye
To this, our place of work and play.
The things we've done in these short three years,
When counted, make such an array,
That 'tho 'twere in our power to make a change,
We'd not wipe one of them away.

As time goes on, as time is bound to do,
And each one finds his destined place,
Which will, at last, bring him unto success,
We hope the years will ne'er erase
The memories so dear to every heart.
But this we know: In every case
We do, indeed, give thanks to Central High
For our good start in life's great race.

Then, too, the friends we've made, the joys we've had,
Most certainly shall us compel
To live them o'er again in memory,
In each small corner where we dwell.
What fate is destined for our future years?
This is a thing that none can tell.
But let us pledge ourselves ne'er to forget
A pledge made, when we say, "Farewell."

Olive Woodruff

Class Song

To Central with our hand
We've proved our loyalty.
Now for our parting stand
We say goodby to thee.
All hail Central
With voices loud and clear,
And laud her forever
With hearts full of cheer.
O praise to old Central,
With hearts full of cheer.
We Seniors are together;
Too soon we'll have to part.
Our paths must separate,
Each a different one to start.
But we'll return
The loggia we will throng,
To hear sung again
That dear old Central song.
Adeste Fideles—
That dear old Central song.

Prophecy of Class of 1923½

January, 1943.

Dear Max:

Helen and I were very enthusiastic over the account of your researches in preparation for your volume on the class of 1923½. Since Helen and I were members of that illustrious class, we fully realize the importance of furnishing the world with a complete account of the present history of its members. We shall be very glad to give you all the information we have been able to procure.

Did you know that Helen Goehlert and Mary Harrington are running a private kindergarten in Agawam? Many of the Agawamites attend. Raymond Randig is a famous jazz composer. His latest number is "What's the use of one sinking together if two can sink alone?" Gertrude Israel and Lillian Louis are successful sleight-of-hand performers. They are especially proficient in the art of making a dollar disappear. Ruth Calderwood has just published a lengthy treatise on the "Fifteen Principal Astrological Idiosyncrasies." Carl Miller is a famous toreador in Spain. He has already written thirteen pamphlets on "The Art of Bull-Throwing" which he says he has practiced constantly since his youth. Mollie Levart and Norma Abrams have been engaged by the well-known artist Morris Katz to assist him in fulfilling a contract for two carloads of hand-painted toothpicks. Marjorie Burnham is touring the country lecturing on the topic, "Woman's Sphere is in the Home." She is assisted by Barbara Mathison. "Playing with Death," Elsa Russell's latest scenario, starring Barbara Tait and Louis Mazer, will soon be released under the management of Harold Freedman. Alma Adams is a nurse in the hospital for the mentally deficient. Alma says many of her former classmates have already been to the hospital for treatment. Doug Loring and Laurie Phelps are still working in collaboration. Doug is a doctor, and Laurie, an undertaker. Anita Pedrazzi, who is running a sweater-shop, says that she owes much of her success in buisness to the expert salesmanship of Sophie Pressman. Rosemary Reynolds is the editor of the "Holyoke Daily Stews." Her column of "Advice to Young Men" is read by all with intense interest. It is rumored that Max Metcalf will be a candidate for the presidency for the fourth time. Evidently his motto is, "If at first you don't succeed, try, try, again." Ida Cohen is proprietress of the "Pay-as-You-Enter Boarding House," an exclusive establishment for exceptional teachers. It is here that Minnie Dashevsky and Leah Klempner recuperate from their exhaustive labors after teaching a combined kindergarten, grammar school, and high school. Isabel Dickinson and Vinnie Adams are playing opposite each other in the musical extravaganza, "The Mad Scramble" written and directed by Bernice Cunningham. This elaborate production has already enjoyed an unprecedented run of three weeks in Palmer, Massachusetts. Virginia Crowther recently added to her many laurels by swimming the English Channel. She confesses that she would never have made the trip without the aid of the Alden Lewis brand of wintergreen life-savers. Bud Ferguson is the leader of the Bingville Sympathy Orchestra. They have the sympathy of the entire village when they play. Olive Woodruff has eloped with a Sicilian millionaire and now spends most of her time writing poetry beneath the olive-trees in Palermo. On her return from the Turtle Town aerial races where she "also ran," Doris Burdett was arrested for speeding by New York city's most efficient aerial traffic officer, Alphonse Alphano. The noted inventor, John Saunders, says that the construction of a machine capable of keeping Alphonse above the sky-scrapers was the heaviest job he ever tackled. Jeanne Converse is said to be a successful criminal lawyer, but it has not been proved as yet. Edwin Lyman is speaker of the House. His latest bill for the "Abolishment of Paint and Powder" has been held in great disfavor by the young ladies, the paint manufacturers, and the flour-mill owners. Mary Donahue and Helen McVeigh will open the Handy Candy Gift Shop. To run one successfully is a gift, we think. Virginia Smart is now employing the powers of loquacity in converting the wild men of the Kobo Islands. Merrill Keyes is a professor of zoology at Columbia University. Professor Keyes expounds the theory that if the world does not continue forever, it will eventually come to an end. Morris Seader is the truant officer at Springfield, Massachusetts. He labors to keep all the children in school, where, he says, he occasionally spent a few days in his youth. The "New Eerie" Tea Room in Chicopee Falls has proved very profitable under the management of Barbara Shattuck and Betty Williamson. Their specialty is "Periwinkle Wiggle" (This is a food, not a dance.) Harry Fisher is president of the American Consolidated Concrete Manufacturers. He always did have a good head for that. Stuart Lyman whose hair is now approximately two feet long is leading the Agony Ensemble of Talabassee. Kibbe Brothers announce a great increase in their sales since they have engaged Muriel Cleveland to demonstrate their famous kisses. The Reverend John Stewart has started a spirited campaign against the growing immorality of the present generation. His slogan is—"Back to the good old days when I was in High School." It is probable that by this time Marguerite Juppenlatz would have become a second Pavlowa, had she not danced her way into the heart of a Russian Count. We will not attempt to give you his name. When Junior Hurlbut found how becoming a sailor suit was, he decided to follow the sea. At present, he is captain of the Sylvia. He has agreed to let anyone of his former classmates ride for half-price. Meyer Levine is a great specialist on heart trouble in Chicago. He recently cured a bad case by advising a young woman to get married. The following advertisement now appears in the Central Recorder, "How to get Thin! Satisfaction guaranteed. For full particulars address Alice Seybolt, Greenwich Village, New York." Philip Heady is the United States ambassador to Greece. He has been severely criticized for being tricked on various occasions by the Greek Government, but he brilliantly comes to his own defense by stating that "people who live in Greece must naturally be slippery." John Holian is a struggling florist who grows geraniums, roses, beets, and carrots. Marion Ferguson will celebrate her twentieth wedding anniversary this June. Everyone tells Marion she looks no older than on the day she graduated. Abraham Kaplan and Alfred Zirkin are lion-tamers at the New York Zoo. They tame the lions by hypnotizing them and putting them to sleep with chloroform or nitro-glycerine.

Allen Spencer is now a millionaire retail merchant. He gives the reason for his success the following splendid motto which should be followed on all occasions. "Hic, haec, hoc, huius, huius, huius." We hope this information will be useful to you, Max. Be sure to send Helen and me a copy of your book.

Sincerely,
Phyllis Fay Beckwith.

Excerpts from the Presentation of the Class of 1924

The time has come when the class of 1924 deems it only fitting and proper to reward and show our appreciation for the outstanding characteristics of its members. We have endeavored to pick the most conspicuous ones; therefore, if you do not receive a present, remember it is the death-like grip of Hollis on our treasury that keeps us from so sinfully wasting money. But enough of this and on with the play (or whatever it is), as our actor Mr. Kingsley Perry would say. Our first gift is to Mr. Edwin Wilkins, he of the unruly hair, which descends into his eyes and bothers him quite immensely. To you, Mr. Wilkins, we are pleased to present this bottle of varnish, which, confidentially, is what Mr. Casman uses to accomplish his "Sheikish" appearance. We feel that this varnish will soon bring toyou many admiring glances from all the Freshman girls.

What member of the class has not often inwardly and outwardly groaned when our financial wizard, Mr. Carlisle, has risen to his noble height in class meetings and impressed upon us the need of money, money, money! We were quite often deeply impressed with your sayings, Hollis, and we realized how much in earnest you really were and how you were our inspiration in all our accomplishments. So, Hollis, we present you with this nickel, which if deposited in the 5 Cents Savings Bank and if kept there long enough, will be a continued source of revenue to you and all your posterity.

We have heard from a reliable source that Percy Laming loves to wash things, dishes, clothes, and even his face and hands, sometimes. So that Percy may continue in his chosen profession and prove a credit to us and to Central, we take great pleasure in giving him this wash-tub set. So that he may start right in, we also present him with a dirty collar, which he can wash to his heart's content.

In the preliminary showing before the school of a scene of the very successful play lately produced on this stage, an incident happened which kept us in cold shivers during the performance. The trousers of the fat man just would not stay where they belonged. Mr. Perry, you really shouldn't let things slip so; it may mean your come-down some day. To help you to overcome this grievous lack, here is a pair of suspenders which will serve you in time of need.

We have in our class a little person who loves to play with toys but it just seems as though someone was always taking them away from her. Here, Yolande, is a beautiful bouncing ball with your initials on it, and if anyone tries to take it away from you, come and tell us.

Ours is indeed a gifted class. Now we discover a person who knows all about court procedure. He visits the court house often and seldom comes out with as much as he had when he went in, for he believes in paying for his education, which is indeed a glorious ideal. Now that your education is finished, "Buck," we wish to present you with this speedometer which is guaranteed not to exceed twenty miles per hour, and which we are sure will protect you from having to take any more lessons at court.

To Stanley Caron we give this very good mirror which will tell you of your good looks when feminine admirers are not around to do so.

"What, late again? Did you bring your excuse for the last three times? No? Well, then, two hours' detention, please." Ah! Ed Leary, how many thoughtful hours have you spent in the classical atmosphere of room 104, and all because you did not bring a written excuse for your daily tardiness. We have felt genuinely sorry for you, hence we offer you this box of writing paper, with a pen and a bottle of ink, that you may forever afterward have your late excuses ready for your employer.

To "Brud" Baldwin, our heartbreaker, we give this diary in which he shall write down for future generations, how to get in solid with teachers, English teachers in general, and one in particular.

Mr. Mahoney had a sad experience last summer which we deem necessary to tell to you. James was enamoured, as young boys will be sometimes, with a very beautiful young lady who was staying at James' summer residence. For some strange reason our heroine's father frowned on the attentions of our promising James, and hence, when he found that secret meetings were planned, grew suspicious. Now at a certain unearthly hour every night our bold hero stole forth to his lady love's house and whistled softly. The window would open and in the moonlight the hero and heroine would rehearse nightly one of Shakespeare's well-known plays. But one night who should be waiting at the window but the naughty papa with a pail of water with which he practically drowned our dear hero. In view of the latter's difficulties, we give him this inspiring book "Sink or Swim," by Horatio Alger in hopes that it may help him in future affairs.

Lastly, but not leastly, we offer to Miss Mitchell this petit phonograph which, if she should ever happen to stop talking, will talk for her and thus not leave her lonely in the unusual silence resulting from her lack of speech.

We have meant these digs in fun and hope that you will regard them only as affectionate knocks and as a jesting way of expressing our esteem and admiration for you all. Station 1-9-2-4 formerly located at Central High School, Springfield, Massachusetts, signing off on June 12, 1924. Goodbye, everybody!

HAROLD JOHNSON.

Excerpts from the Will of the Class of 1924

We, the class of 1924, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and twenty-four, and of the foundation of Central High School the eighty-third, being in good health of body, and of sound mind and memory, yet considering the uncertainties of our lives, and to the end that we may leave the Central High School in good standing, do, therefore, make and declare this our last will and testament, in the manner following; that is to say:

1 To this giddy school we leave the right to welcome joyfully Mr. Hill whom we suspended March 4 for lack of school spirit.

2 To the class of 1924½ we distribute the effervescing spirit of our beloved class, which we have elevated to a height never before equalled. If treated with tender care we guarantee that this spirit will raise your class to the lofty heights upon which ours now stands.

3 To all those who unsuccessfully tried to stay with us, we leave Stan Caron's very original joke about D. Gordon's new suit to cheer them in their moments of despair.

4 To the class of 1925 we portion out pieces of John Casman's suave manner, for we feel a little will go a long way. John Casman also bequeaths to Robert Frisbie his twin title of "Sheik" and "Beau Brummel."

5 To augment the potency of George Yarrington's "gift of gab," Leyte Mitchell donates her talkativeness.

6 To all the suffering geometry students everywhere, George Flagg bequeaths his ability to toss off new and easier proofs to any given theorem.

7 Unto Janet Keyes and Mary Thornton, Betty Pratt gives her ability to attract a man a week.

8 To Miss Anthony, Edwin Wilkins leaves his literary ability, which is to be loaned to her suffering classes on poetry days.

9 With a sad smile Van Dyke Schermerhorn leaves his title of Class Bluffer to Herbert Borklund. Van asks that this gift be kept sacred and not dragged in the mire of study.

10 "Brud" Baldwin leaves his subtle power to attract faculty admiration to Glenn Pease, who, although not aspiring to be in an English Teacher's good graces, nevertheless has his own leanings towards the girls' gym.

11 To Mr. Smith, Hollis Carlisle leaves his extreme pessimism with which to quell the optimism of all future English eight classes.

12 To Grace Mitton, Yolande Rainault leaves her ability to dance with feet, eyes, and heart.

13 With her dying breath Jean McLachlin leaves her inimitable ability to "love 'em and leave 'em" to Ginny Boss.

14 To the 3B Class the "Kandy Kids" of the 3A class leave their sweetness Formula:—

Liberal application to the faculty yields a perfect senior record.

15 Finally, although we, the class of 1924, check out at 3 p. m., at the parting of the ways, we leave to all a fond but sad farewell.

In witness whereof, we have signed and published and declared this instrument our last will and testament on this eleventh day of April, 1924.

(Signed) STANLEY E. CARON

Signed, published, and declared by the above named president, as and for the last will and testament of the class of 1925, in the presence of us, who, at his request, have signed as witnesses to the same.

Class of 1924 Song

Central's Sons Are We

Ne'er shall we forget you,
Oh, school of glorious years,
Years of life and sunshine,
Memory brightens tears.

Laughter, songs, and gladness
Of youth we shower'd thee
Oh, life what more cans't offer
Than thou hast offer'd me?

'Tho we now must leave you—
Bid you fond goodbye,
Yet our heart of hearts thou holdest,
Dear old Central High.

Love hath labor no more sweet
Than to sing thy praises fair,
For we are all thy children
Come forth to do and dare.

Chorus—

Central's sons are we,
Staunch and true we'll ever be,
Fighting on for Thee,
Central High!

History

The class of '24½ made its promising entrance into Central High School on January 30, 1922. Its first meeting as an organized class was called on May 10. The 1A and 2B socials held on December 8, 1922 and April 19 of the following year respectively were forerunners of the joyously anticipated social event, the Junior Prom. Members of the class still look back with pleasure to the evening of October 5, 1923, in the gym of the High School of Commerce.

A much appreciated stage spot-light was presented to the school by this class through the usual medium. But the accomplishment of which the class is most proud and for which it is probably most famous is the system of student police which it has devised for regulating traffic at recess. Members of the class have developed this system to a high point of efficiency,—so high that it has gained the permission of the Student Advisory Board to continue supervision of traffic until its graduation. 1924½ can well afford to be proud of its record at Central.

History

In the fall of 1922, the class of '25 entered Central with a membership of almost three hundred people. It boasted at this time a larger enrollment than any previous class in Central. Its first class function was a social held in January, 1923, in the Tech gym. During its 1A semester, two notable events were accredited to the class; a social held on April 20, and a most entertaining assembly. The talent for the latter was gathered wholly from the class itself. In the first semester of the Junior Year, a third social was held on December 14. This was managed by an able committee who produced the best sort of an evening possible for a social.

The biggest event in the history of the class of '25 was the Junior Prom, held April 25. This is always one of the biggest dances of the year, but this year the Prom was so overwhelmingly a success that the classes immediately following will have to exert themselves to arrange a superior dance.

History

In January, 1923, the class of '25½ entered Central with two hundred and fifty members who promptly organized and elected officers.

Their first class function was a 1B Social which helped everybody to "get acquainted." As they possessed both ability and school spirit, they gave promise of a class worthy of Central's name.

In their 1A year, the class gave its second social on November 23. This social was a distinct success, both socially and financially. Garnet and silver were chosen as class colors, and an attractive banner was promptly made. The English 4 Prize-Speaking Contest, held January 21, was participated in entirely by members of this class.

When 2B's, the class instituted a card system of collecting dues whereby each whose card does not show full payment of dues is no longer a member of the organization. During their stay at Central, the members of the class of '25½ have boasted a long honor roll, have joined in Central's activities, and have shown that, as a class, they will bring honor and credit to Central.

History

The class of '26 was not organized for some time after its arrival here at Central, owing to considerable difficulty in the election of its officers. After the custom of the more recent Freshman classes, the class of '26 held its assemblies in the Science Hall, apart from the rest of the school until February. This fact, however, did not lessen its interest in the school, for it has already adopted the motto "Scholarship First," in that an average of twenty of its one hundred and ninety-four members continually find their names on the Honor Roll. On January 11 the class held its first social, which was a marked success.

As a result of its recent class meetings, a striking banner with silver letters on a background of royal blue, bearing the date 1926, has appeared in Central's halls. Moreover, the class of '26 has taken due advantage of the drama class. Several of its members appeared in "Three Pills in a Bottle" and "Pinafore." Like all other classes, it will be "the best class in the solar system."

A Review of the Year

The school year 1923—1924 has without doubt been the most eventful year in the history of Central High School.

To begin with, it brought into existence six new organizations: the Affiliated Debating Societies, the Auxiliary Welfare Board, the Banjo Club, the Cheer Leaders' Club, the Music Club, and the Student Police Force. These new clubs have all made fine beginnings, and a bright future is predicted for them.

The year also gave birth to a new publication, namely the Central High School Handbook. This book was published by the Central Hi-Y chiefly to teach the Freshmen about the school and its many organizations. However, several hundred copies were sold to the upper-classmen and the teachers. The Handbook gives the names and room numbers of the faculty, the names of the veterans in the various sports, brief accounts of the different activities, editorials on the Dartmouth and Harvard Trophies, articles on awards and scholarships, and general information of interest to students.

The Central Hi-Y rendered another valuable service to the school by instituting Honor Week. One school week was set aside for a series of attacks on dishonesty in general and cheating in particular. Placards bearing the words, "You are on Your Honor", were placed in the various rooms, speeches were made, and several pointed editorials were printed in the Central Recorder in the hope of reducing dishonesty to a minimum.

Another event of the year was the installation of drinking-fountains in the corridors. Much publicity was given the matter in the Forum of the Central Recorder. Each of the six undergraduate classes passed resolutions favoring the installation of drinking-fountains, and the Student Advisory Board submitted the joint petition of the six undergraduate classes to Mr. Hill to be sent by him to the City Property Committee. Since Mr. Hill had already asked that body to install the bubblers, the combined influence of the students' petition and Mr. Hill's request succeeded in securing the much-needed drinking-fountains.

During the last two semesters, the drama class has been very active. In the fall it presented Three Pills in a Bottle and at the Christmas Assembly it produced A Nursery Maid of Heaven. The two most important productions were the Gilbert and Sullivan comic-opera, H. M. S. Pinafore under the management of the class of 1923½, and Shakespeare's King Henry IV under the management of the class of 1924.

The greatest event of the year was the presentation of the Harvard Phi Beta Kappa Trophy to Central High School for permanent possession as the result of the success of its graduates in the Harvard entrance examinations in 1915, 1916, 1920, and 1923. This trophy stands as a permanent memorial to the high scholastic standing of the Springfield Central High School.

These many achievements go to show that the year 1923—1924 was one of the greatest in the history of Central High School.

The Harvard Trophy

The Harvard Chapter of Phi Beta Kappa, election to which, from the point of view of scholarship, is the highest honor that can be paid a student at Harvard, voted in 1914 to offer an inter-scholastic scholarship trophy in order to encourage scholarship in secondary schools. This trophy was to be awarded annually to the school whose candidates received the highest averages in the entrance examinations for Harvard.

The trophy is a bronze bas-relief with space at the bottom for engraving the name of the school winning the trophy, and the year. The trophy is kept a year and then passed on to the next school winning it.

In 1915, Central had the honor of being the first school to win this Harvard trophy, inasmuch as it had a greater percentage of its graduates on the honor list than any other school, public or private, in the United States. In 1916 Centralites again won the trophy. The award this time was based on the ratio of the number of boys attaining the honor list to the total number of candidates. Again the trophy came to Central in 1920 on the basis of the percentage of the marks made by the various school groups.

In 1923, the Harvard Trophy, under the 1920 contest rules, was permanently won for Central High School. The school is proud of these men who have made possible the permanent possession of the trophy.

The Affiliated Debating Societies, one of Central's new organizations, includes the members of all the debating clubs of the school. It was formed through the efforts of Stanley Caron, a former president of the Senate.

The purpose of the organization is to develop the ability of its members in public-speaking and debating, and to inform them on topics of current interest through speeches by prominent citizens.

As a result of the monthly meetings of the club, a better spirit of coöperation between the various organizations has grown up.

The outstanding event of the semester was the Senate-Pierides Debate. Stanley Caron and George Yarrington on the negative opposed Louise Davis and Marguerite Favrao on the affirmative. The subject was: Resolved, that the President of the United States should be elected for a term of six years with no reëlections. The judges, Mr. Fenner, Miss Kingsley, and Mr. Knapp, awarded the decision to the affirmative.

Under Presidents Caron and Yarrington, the Senate, with its new faculty adviser, Mr. Edwin E. Smith, has enjoyed another successful year. Now in its twenty-third year, it still lives up to its fine reputation.

On December 10, the Senate Tablet Debate for 1924 was held in the assembly hall. Stanley Caron and D. Gordon Graham upheld the affirmative side of the question: "Resolved, that the United States should join the World Court at once." Robert Harris and George Yarrington upheld the negative. The judges awarded the decision to D. Gordon Graham. George Yarrington received honorable mention.

On April 24, the annual Amherst Cup Debate was held in a school assembly. The contest was open to the entire school and was held under the auspices of the Senate as usual. The debate this year was on the popular subject: "Resolved, that the licenses of the local independent bus owners should be renewed on May 1, 1924." Stanley Caron and Robert Harris upheld the affirmative and James Pendergast and George Yarrington the negative. The judges awarded the decision to George Yarrington. Stanley Caron received honorable mention.

The Liberty Chest offers funds from which appropriations can be made by the vote of its trustees for the benefit of the school at large. This year, the interest from the funds has been used to defray the expenses of the History Pageant and the Dhalwani Lecture, to purchase honor pins, and to provide the cash prizes for the 3B Declamation Contest.

The Custodian's report of the Liberty Chest, April, 1924, is as follows:

ATHLETICS

Athletic Review

Football

The football team of this year was not a distinct success on the basis of games won and lost; but it made a very creditable showing. Under the leadership of the new coach, Harold W. Presson, the team gained three victories, suffered two defeats, and fought two scoreless tie games. In the first game of the season, Central's husky warriors held Greenfield, which later proved to be the Western Massachusetts champion, to a scoreless tie. After victories over Chicopee and the M. A. C. Two Year Men, the team suffered two successive defeats at the hands of Deerfield and Tech. The next game, with West Springfield High, was the big upset of the season. West Springfield's undefeated team crossed the river only to suffer a defeat inflicted by the stalwart Blue and White eleven. In the final game of the season, Central and Commerce battled to a 0-0 tie. After much dispute the interschool championship was awarded to Tech by virtue of one victory and one tie game.

Soccer

The soccer team finished second in the interschool series this year with one victory over Commerce and a defeat at the hands of Tech. The team annexed one victory from Deerfield and two victories from the International College, and met reverses six times. The Springfield College Freshmen, Wilbraham Academy, and Ludlow High were the teams responsible for these defeats. In the last game of the season, the Central booters held the strong Williston Academy team to a tie, thus closing a not very successful season.

Basketball

The 1923—24 basketball season was a great improvement over that of last year. "Had" Presson started his first year of basketball coaching here, but after the third game his duties were taken over by David H. Brown in accordance with the new policy adopted in the high schools, by which the regular athletic coach is relieved of developing the basketball team. The Presson-Brown coached quintet won seven and lost five games. The outstanding game of the season was with Crosby High at Waterbury, Connecticut, where we were defeated 36—25 after a memorable struggle. We have yet to win an interschool Championship in basketball, although this season we defeated Commerce, which made a strong bid for the title. Our new gym was used this season for the first time and our championship games filled the place to capacity. The second team also had a fairly successful season.

Crew

The Spring of 1923 marked the revival of rowing as a major sport in the three high schools. In the regatta held in June, Central's crew defeated Tech by one length. An All-City crew was chosen and Pendergast and Cantwell were selected as Central's representatives. The victory this season marks the first victory by Central in rowing and gives our school one leg on the Pirnie Cup.

Baseball

Central is very fortunate in having eight letter men left from last year's team around whom this spring's team will be built. Last year's outfield is left intact but another infielder and some good battery material is sorely needed. Bob Hamilton will be missed this season, but "Had" Presson is hopeful of developing one or more good twirlers.

Hockey

Owing to adverse weather conditions, there was no hockey team this winter. Dan Cavanaugh was elected captain and Bill Shaw manager, but neither had an opportunity to officiate.

The G. A. A.

The Girls' Athletic Association is the one organization in the school which receives the enthusiastic and whole-hearted support of every girl. Each semester the Freshmen are initiated and on the night of their initiation a costume party is held at which the initiates are put through their final paces by providing an entertainment for the upper classmen.

There is one time within the school year when every single girl is called upon for work. This is when the G. A. A. Christmas Fair is held, and each girl does her part to make it a success. These fairs have come to be a custom with the G. A. A., just as the sending of flowers to girls and women members of the faculty who are ill, and each year they grow more successful.

The sport work opens up in the fall with field hockey and soccer until the snow flies; the last game is celebrated with a huge hot-dog roast. After that there is basketball with its many hotly-contested interclass games. In April a G. A. A. assembly is held in which the progress of the girls' work is set forth before the school. This year, in addition to the regular interclass meet held every April, there was a demonstration of the gymnasium work of the schools of the city held at the auditorium, in which Central girls played a large part. With Spring come the outdoor sports again, swimming and tennis, with a swimming meet and a tennis tournament at the very last.

The crowning point of the G. A. A. business for the year is the choosing of the girl of the graduating class who has done the most for the school. This is done in a mass-meeting of the girls, and on Class Day that girl is presented with the medal for the Best-All-Around Girl.

Surely, there is no organization to which the girls are more proud to belong and which does more for the school than the Girls' Athletic Association.

Heard in Class Rooms

Miss Anthony, (after having talked for five minutes about the different ways that she doesn't want words corrected on the paper): "And, class, I don't want anybody to wet the end of his finger, rub a hole in the paper, and then write the word over the hole."

(For reference consult Aeneid)

Student (translating): I put my arms around her and kissed her. That's as far as I got, professor.

Professor (absent-mindedly): Quite far enough, quite far enough.

Dr. Law (trying to recall to the minds of the pupils the name of historical figure): I believe one of your geometries is written by a man of the same name.

Betty Fearns: Plane?

(From a test paper)

The Spanish Armada was called the Invisible Armada. It was made in England and all the people of England were curious to see it on the water. Finally the day came for it to start. The ship was sunk while on mid-ocean and shattered to pieces. All the pieces were taken together and it took years before the ship was fixed.

Ancient History Teacher: Class, you will find the account of Hannibal's journey in Webster's—

Keyes (interrupting, in eagerness to show intelligence): Dictionary!

Poor Peter

Translation in French 3G:

La fermière prit le petit Pierre à part et dit—

The farmer's wife took little Peter apart and said—

Teacher—What does fiancée mean?

Freshie—Er-er-mother-in-law!

A certain teacher (a fiend for attendance): That's fine! Only Mary absent—oh, well, let's hope she's ill.

Pupil (starting to recite on current events): The United States is the first country that ever attempted to fly around the world.

Dramatis Personae

Monsieur le maître
Crowd of knowledge-craving studes la classe

Act the First (and the last)

Pupils file in sedately and take places with utmost decorum, immediately settling down to study. Bell rings. Intermission of five minutes. Monsieur is evidently "en route." Two minutes later. Monsieur skips merrily in.

Monsieur: Ah-h-h-h-h! Bonjour la classe! Je suis un peu en retard mais n' importe—je suis ici! Voyons! Nous sommes tous ici? Oui—très-très-très très bien! Il faut travailler. Now I want to get some outside reading in; so we must work fast! Allons! Mademoiselle, je pense que c'est à vous—

(Poor unfortunate gets clumsily to feet and starts reading weighty passages from "Les Oberlé")

—"Un homme qui descendait, en ce moment, par un sentier des vosges—

Monsieur: Ah—un moment, mes enfants,—les vosges! Ah if you could only see—such an excruciatingly beee-u-tee-ful sight! C'est quelque chose, je vous assure. These very feet that you see me now standing on have trod those marvelous paths-oh-h-h-h! If I had the time to tell you! But the clock is ticking away up there—In the school that I shall have some day, there will be no clocks—no marks—no bells—we will only study this so bee-u-tee-ful language—cela sera parfait, n'est-ce pas? Allons donc—avec la traduction—Monsieur—

(A miserable wail of "not prepared" is sleepily offered.)

Monsieur: Ah! c'est mauvais! What do you young people do? Not prepared! Why not? Too many motion pictures, I suppose. Mes amis, do you know what I saw advertised the other day? A moving picture—"Adam's Rib." Think of it? And you prefer that sort of thing to this marvelous language! Est-ce possible? Mais il faut aller—Mademoiselle, c'est longtemps. Vous avez été malade? Ah! dommage! Continuez.

(The hectic affair continues until suddenly—)

(Chorus of disapproval from studious class.)

Monsieur: Mais, non. Ce n'est pas trop—Well, how about five more pages? Too much? Well, take as much as you can do in your hour. C'est bien?

Allez—Bonjour!

(Curtain discreetly falls before a repetition of the above can begin.)

3A CLASS MAKING CANDY

Thoughts of a Hungry Student

"Well, I'm here—All right, laugh if you want to, you lucky second-bell kids, I'll have the laugh on you next week—Oof! What a smell!—What's on the menu?——Cabbage salad—Huh! can't they have something decent once in a while?—Chocolate cake,—Portland cement or Plaster of Paris, I wonder?—Gosh! quarter of one!—My turn at last! Ice cream!—That's ice cream?—Thought it was soup——Oh, here's the soup—Tomato?—Not so bad——Shall I have milk or cocoa?——Cold milk, I guess——It's warmer, there's more of it and it's quite a bit stronger than the cocoa,——Chicken sandwich? Good—two—now, that's one ice cream, one soup, milk, and two sandwiches—Let's see—ten, seventeen—twenty, no—twent——no, twenty-three,——no—All Right——Yes-s! I'm coming——It's only twenty-four, I tell you!—Oh! well, have it your own way!—Where's that money? Phew, here—I've only twenty-seven—take it like a good fellow—all right——will you put that sandwich back for me?—Whew, I'm out of there—oh! my straws!——Only one; huh, they're stingy here—Look out! There goes my milk!! You've busted it!—Five cents gone to smash!—Me? Me! pick up the glass? Suff'rin' cats!———Say, mind my tray while I get a stool?—Can't find one nowhere—Behind me?——Why the dickens didn't you tell me?—Now where—oh, here's my change—This chicken sandwich is awful——they must have fed the hens on beef—Now for the soup—I often wondered until now what they did with the lunch-room dishwater—Ugh! take it away——I've had enough—Where's the candy? Hey, wait!—two cents' worth—these'll do——Money? Oh yes! Where is it now? I left it on the tray! There's the bell. Here, take this candy back——Now for a French test——What a life!"

In the Rolls-Royce, motor car design has reached its greatest perfection. Its beauty is the perfect union of strength and grace. It is not subject to the whim of transient style. A trip through the shops, where the car is built complete from radiator to rear axle, will be found to be an informing and agreeable experience. Visitors are always welcome at the Rolls-Royce Works.

Henry Ford and True Bros.

Read this:—Ford doubles his plant. Does he put prices up "to pay for it"? Not a bit of it. He simply gets more room so as to take better care of business.

True Bros. double their store for the very same good reason, and don't let anybody tell you that they "put their prices up" to pay for the improvement. MORE BUSINESS pays for it. See the point? The old motto still runs this store.

When You Select This Bank

In selecting this bank as their banking home, our customers were influenced by several reasons.

Some came because of the recommendation of friends—others at the invitation of this Company to try its service. Many selected us for our convenient location, while others were willing to go a little out of their way to utilize our facilities.

Everyone is here because "we satisfy." A very good reason for selecting your banking home.
